Small Works bring Great Wonders to The Cowboy During 17th Annual “Small Works, Great Wonders®” Art Sale

Featuring smaller scale works of art by renowned artists, Small Works, Great Wonders offers art collectors the opportunity to acquire fine works at an affordable price.

OKLAHOMA CITY – Returning for its 17th year, the Small Works, Great Wonders art sale will showcase more than 200 original works from some of the best contemporary Western artists in the nation. The exhibition opens November 5, with the sale taking place Friday, November 11. Unsold art will remain on exhibit and available for purchase through November 27.

“Small Works, Great Wonders is such a fun blend of traditional and contemporary smaller-scale works that are great for beginning as well as more seasoned collectors,” said Natalie Shirley, President and CEO. “The quality and affordability of the art makes this one of the Museum’s most anticipated annual events, and a portion of each sale directly supports the important education programs here at the Museum.”

Those attending the November 11 sale will enjoy cocktails, light hors d’oeuvres and the exciting, in-person fixed-price draw for art. Buyers may leave with art in hand at the end of the night. For the second year in a row, the sale will utilize the Museum’s Western Heritage art sale app for iPhone and iPad. Proxy service will also be available, and arrangements can be made in advance by contacting Trent Riley at (405) 839-7097.

Reservations are required for the sale event. Tickets are $75; $65 for Museum members. To see the artwork online and register to attend the sale, visit swgw.nationalcowboymuseum.org. Reservations can also be made by calling (405) 839-7876.
